What is a

Cambridge International School?

A Cambridge International School is a school recognized worldwide by Cambridge International Education, part of the University of Cambridge.

This means that the school adopts international educational standards, uses official Cambridge programmes, and is part of a global network of over 10,000 schools in 160 countries.

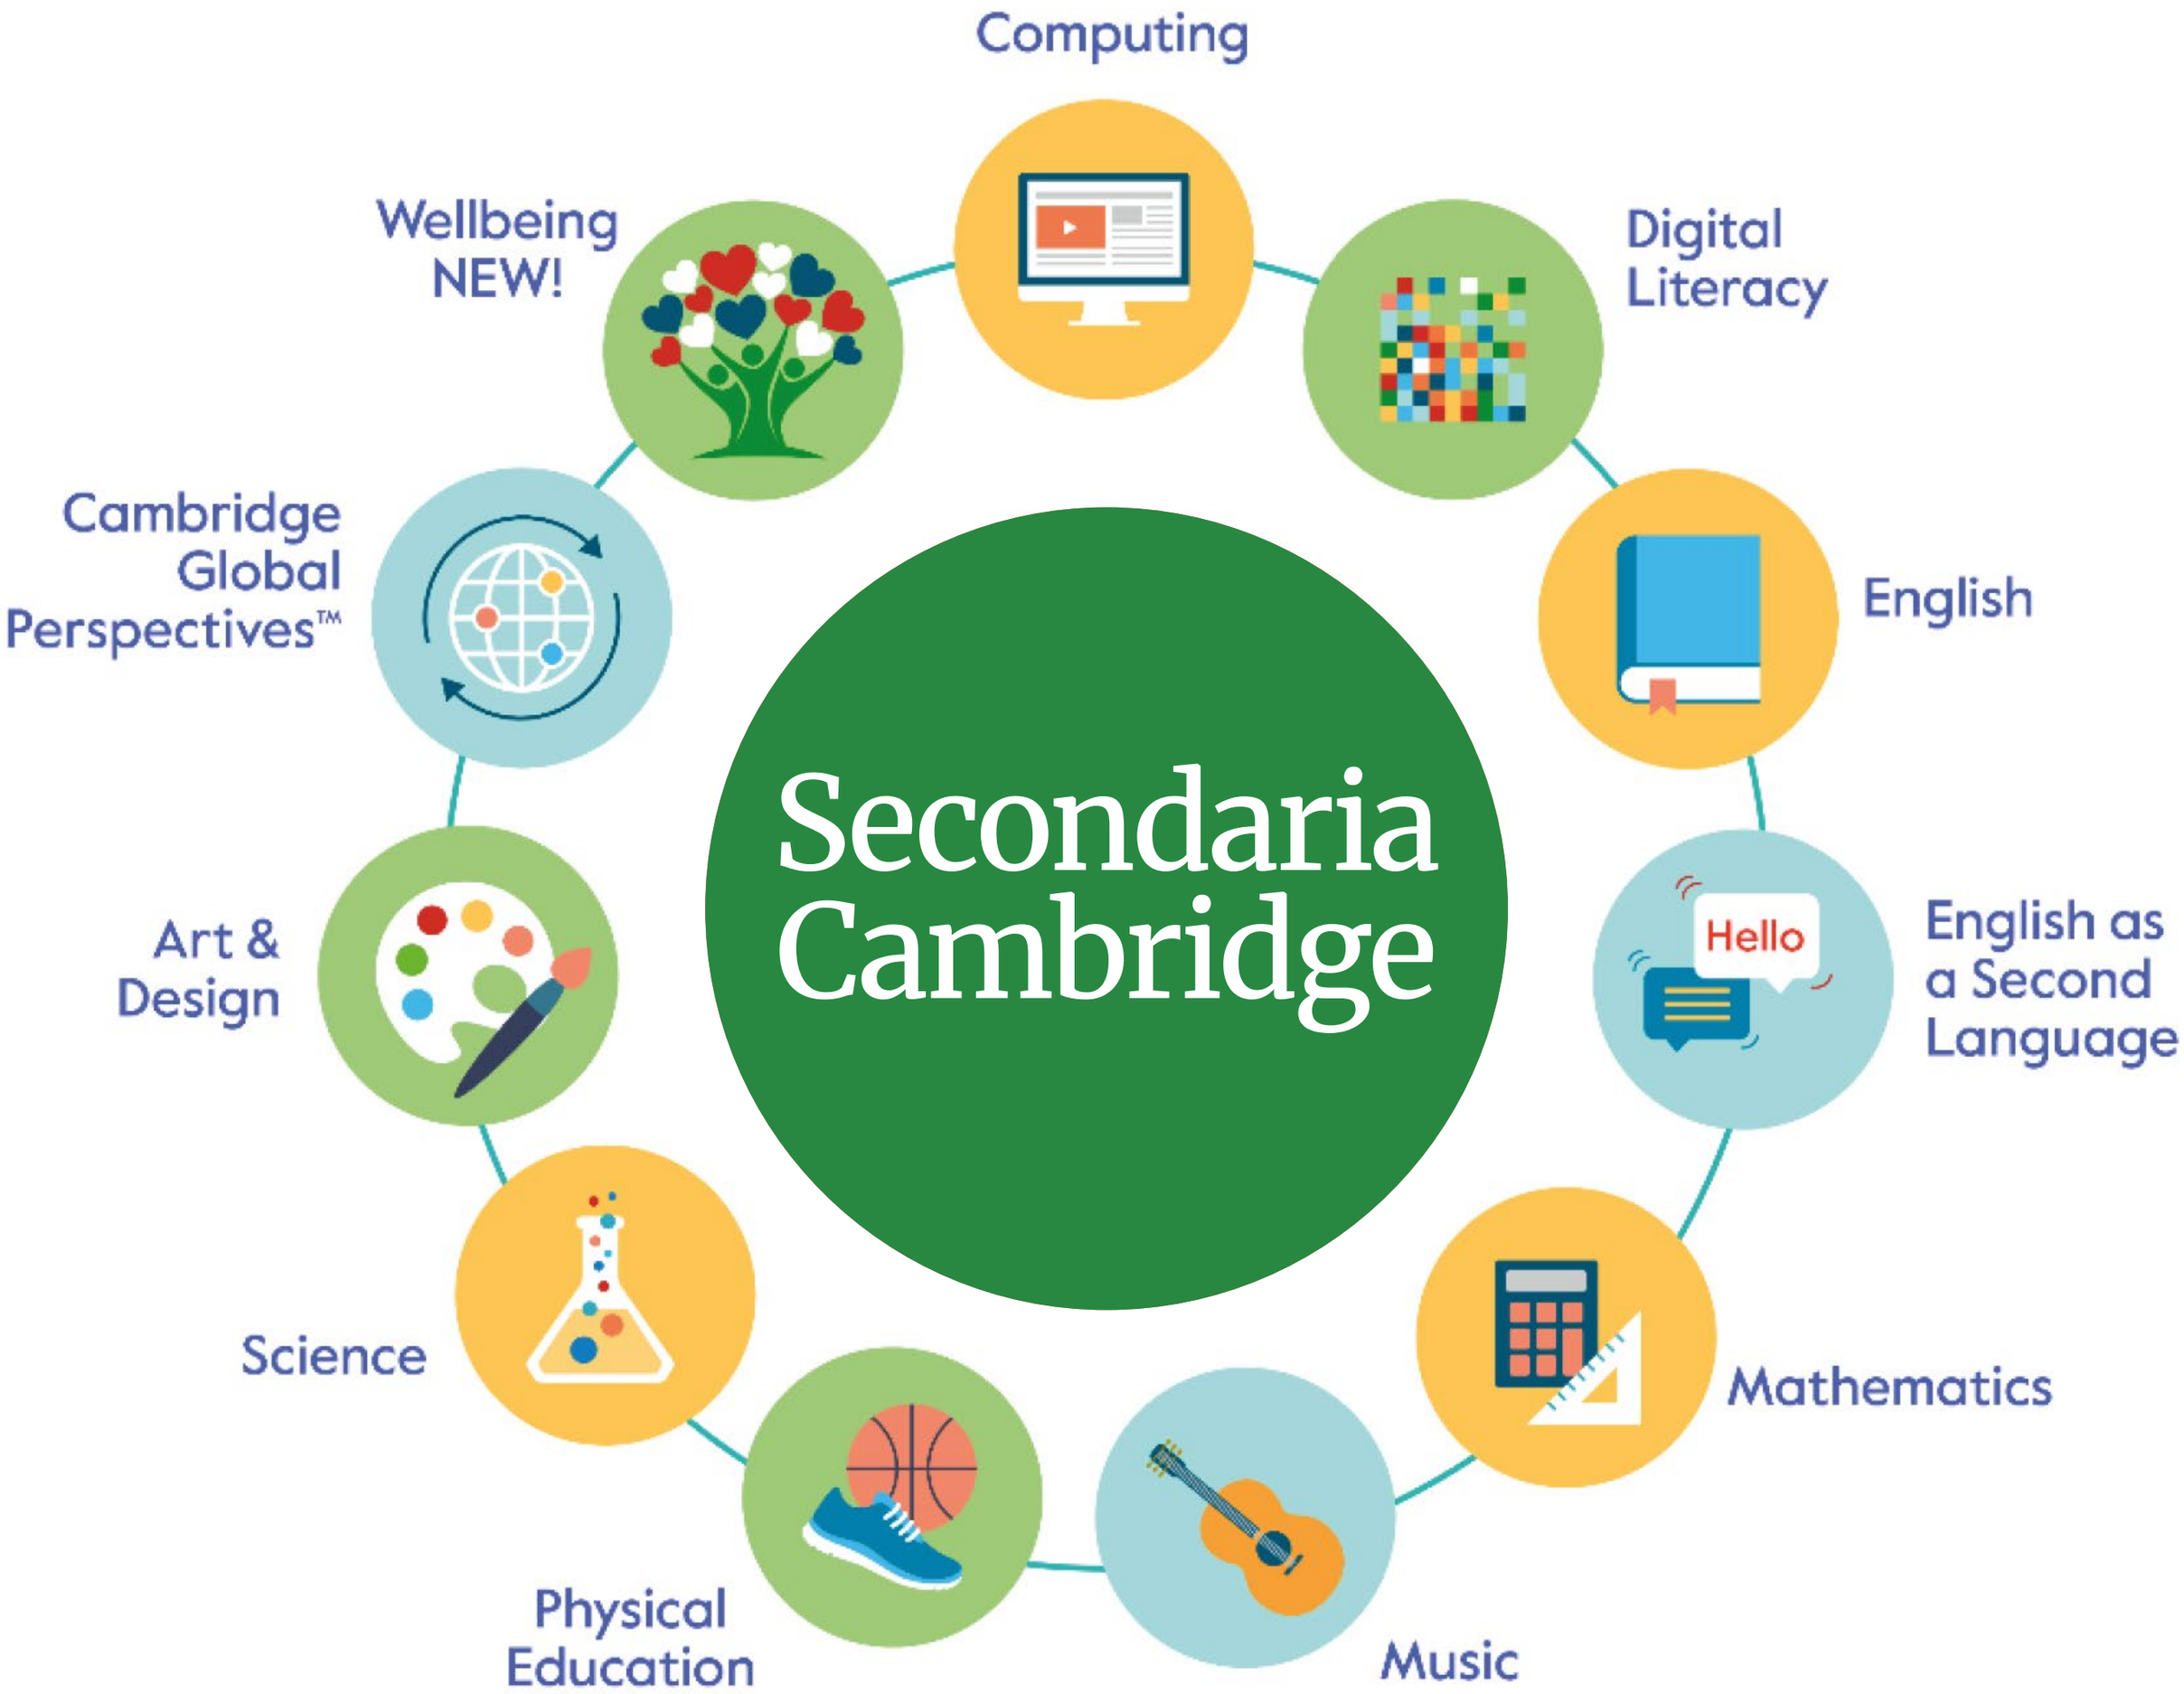

Being a Cambridge school means offering students a modern and well-rounded education that combines strong academic knowledge, personal skills, and a global outlook.

A pathway designed to nurture curious, confident, and future-ready learners.

we don't study English, we learn in English.

The Cambridge Lower Secondary School at the Keynes Institute supports students during the age of choice, turning their school journey into an authentic experience of personal growth. It is a school that fosters responsibility, curiosity, and awareness of one's potential. The Italian curriculum is integrated with the Cambridge Lower Secondary Curriculum, recognised worldwide for its active, interdisciplinary, and international approach.

Cambridge Lower Secondary is built around a comprehensive and well-balanced educational framework that develops not only subject knowledge, but also the personal and social skills needed to face the future with confidence and awareness.

Alongside these subjects, students benefit from the key focus areas that define the Keynes Institute: Life Skills, Performing Arts, and foreign languages.

LIFE SKILLS

Students learn to understand themselves, communicate effectively, speak in public, and face everyday challenges with balance. They grow in emotional awareness, collaboration, and responsibility in their choices.

PERFORMING ARTS

Performing Arts include theatre, music, and dance. They help students express themselves, communicate, and build confidence. Through performance, students learn to work together, channel emotions, and develop creativity, self-confidence, and linguistic fluency.

FOREIGN LANGUAGES

English, French, and Spanish are studied in parallel to build strong international language competence. French, which is not included in the national curriculum, has been added to strengthen language preparation and support a smoother transition to high school. The programme also includes conversation hours to use languages in real contexts and build confidence.

Cambridge Learner Attributes

Students at the Keynes Institute learn to navigate the complexity of the world with balance and critical thinking, combining cognitive abilities, social skills, and personal qualities such as resilience, motivation, and self-awareness.

Confident: self-assured, able to express ideas clearly and face new challenges.

Responsible: aware of their choices, respectful, empathetic, and mindful of the environment.

Reflective: able to analyse, evaluate, and continuously improve themselves and their learning.

Innovative: curious, creative, and ready to explore new perspectives.
